Unit 7 - Fiscal Policy

Chapter 30 // Unit Summary : Similarly to the Monetary Policy actions of the Fed that were covered in Unit 6, the Federal government often works to help return our economy to its long-run equilibrium. The government adjusts levels of spending, taxes and transfer payments to achieve macroeconomic goals. This is called Fiscal Policy.

Key Concepts

- Discretionary Fiscal Policy= the government passes a new law that explicitly changes overall tax or spending levels with the intent of influencing the level or overall economic activity
- Automatic Stabilizers= tax and spending rules that have the effect of slowing down the rate of decrease in aggregate demand when the economy slows down and restraining aggregate demand when the economy speeds up, without any additional change in legislation
- Contractionary Fiscal Policy= fiscal policy that decreases the level of aggregate demand, either through cuts in government spending or increases in taxes
- Expansionary Fiscal Policy= fiscal policy that increases the level of aggregate demand, either through increases in government spending or cuts in taxes
- Balanced Budget= when government spending and taxes are equal
- Budget Deficit= when the federal government spends more money than it receives in taxes in a given year
- Budget Surplus= when the government receives more money in taxes than it spends in a year
- National Debt= the total accumulated amount the government has borrowed, over time, and not yet paid back
- Crowding Out= federal spending and borrowing causes interest rates to rise and business investment to fall
- Progressive Tax= a tax that collects a greater share of income from those with high incomes than from those with lower incomes
- Proportional Tax= a tax that is a flat percentage of income earned, regardless of level of income
- Regressive Tax= a tax in which people with higher incomes pay a smaller share of their income in tax
