

DNA Extraction Lab!

BACKGROUND: As part of our unit on the cell, students become familiar with the structure and function of organelles in eukaryotes. One of the main organelles taught in class is the nucleus, which is the cell's control center and stores DNA, the blueprints of life.

In the DNA extraction lab, students actually get to extract DNA from living strawberry, banana, and/or leaf cells. Along the way, they learn about the structure of other cell parts such as the cell membrane and histones, both which need to be addressed for this lab.

Below is a list of materials the teacher needs to set up at a lab station for each pair of students BEFORE the lab takes place:

- Lab Goggles/Aprons
- 1 Ziplock Bag
- 1 Bowl filled with detergent solution (for the entire day, pre make a 1000mL solution using 100mL of dish soap, distilled water, and plenty of salt)
- Meat tenderizer (unflavored)
- 1 Clear, plastic cup
- 1 Coffee filter paper
- 1 Rubber band
- 1 plastic pipette
- 1 ice cold glass tube of 91% Isopropyl alcohol (have a class set of 12 or so on ice or in a freezer each period)
- 1 paper clip
- 2 medium-sized pieces of soft fruit (Strawberries work the best, as they have 14 chromosomes and have a whopping 8 copies of them! Talk about polyploidy!)
- Plastic spoons/bowls

There is no lab handout with this lab, as students' hands and lab stations can get quite messy. Instead, I write the directions on my board and actually do the lab with them step by step. While teachers should let students explore on their own, for this lab in particular, these steps have to be done just right. Here is what I write on the board the day of the lab:
